THE WAR IN FRANCE.

THE preparations for the defense of Paris, which have recently been prosecuted with such extraordinary vigor, seem to have had the double object of making the capital secure and of relieving the French armies in the field from the necessity of falling back to assist in its protection. The report that MacMahon has marched to the relief of Bazaine, instead of seeking a position where he could oppose the advance of the Crown Prince, tends to confirm this theory; and if it is correct, the huge labors which have recently been imposed on the Parisians are indirectly offensive as well as defensive in their character.

It is an object of vital importance to the I rench cause to maintain communications with Bazaine, and to enable him to retire from Metz if the exigencies of the campaign render his retirement advisable. Whether this object has been accomplished remains uncertain, as it is impossible to sift the exact truth from the contradictory statements bearing on this point. It seems probable that the rumor that a portion of Bazaine's army had retreated to the line of the railway running northwest from Thionville is based on the arrival of MacMahon's corps or other reinforcements in that locality; and this movement may be but the prelude to a desperate effort to secure, by assistance from without the walls of Metz, as well as from within, the complete deliverance of Bazaine.

The Prussians apparently believed that they had surrounded Metz on all sides, but when it is remembered that they are repairing the losses incurred in a series of engagemeats which are equivalent in destructiveness to three conflicts like our terrible battle at Gettysburg, it will not appear singular that the powerful French army in Metz has been able to keep open a small outlet in some quarter, and to receive the supplies of food and ammunition which are essential to its existence.

The martial interest of the conflict now hinges more closely than ever upon impending struggles near Metz. Nearly the whole regular French army is in that vicinity; and if it be true that the Crown Prince has fallen back to unite his forces with those of Steinmetz and Prince Frederick Charles, a battle between the main bodies of both armies may to the next great event of this campaign.

THE WHISKY WAR.

THE United States authorities yesterday distinguished themselves by making a successful raid upon one of the most dangerous of the gangs of ruffians that infest this city, and it is to be hoped that the prompt action of United States Marshal Gregory in summoning to the assistance of his officers a file of marines from the Navy Yard will sufficiently demonstrate that the Government has the power as well as the disposition to enforce its laws, and to bring those who violate them to justice. The Ellenger brothers, the seizure of whose whisky still was the occasion of the unwonted display of military force made yesterday, are notorious for their evil deeds. Not only have they been engaged in the illegal distillation of whisky. but they have been implicated in a number of dastardly outrages, and the fact that they have hitherto managed to escape such punishment as they merited doubtless encouraged fhem to believe that they could continue to violate the laws with impunity. The attack upon the United States Marshals was a proof that they considered themselves strong enough to defy any ordinary exhibition of force, and but for the opportune arrival of the squad of marines, the triumph of ruffianism would have been complete. The Deputy United States Marshals who had charge of the prisoners arrested in Ellenger's distillery early yesterday morning are entitled to the highest praise, not only for the manner in which they made their captures, but for the gallant style in which they fought the mob who attacked them for the purpose of effecting a rescue. That they were overpowered and compelled to send for armed support is nothing to their discredit, and the only matter for regret is that in the melee one of the prisoners was able to make his escape.

In view of the peculiarly outrageous nature of the riot yesterday, the very small amount of bail demanded by Assistant United States District Attorney Valentine and allowed by Commissioners Hibler and Biddle must surprise every one. $3000 apiece, which was the security accepted for the appearance of the prisoners in court, does not represent the magnitude of the offense of which they are accused. $20,000 bail was demanded by Judge Ludlow for the assailants of Officer Brooks, and the aldermen of the city and the judges of the local courts have time and again required larger security for no greater offenses than those alleged against the Ellengers than was required yesterday by the United States Commissioners. Not only was I cowardly or cruel motives.

the bail too small, but it was an error, in judgment at least, that the rersons who offered to become security were not required to produce the title-deeds to their property. The doubtful character of the bail offered is increased by the fact that Jacob Ellenger, who was himself held to answer for obstructing the course of justice, was allowed to swear to the value of his property, and to enter security for his brother Joseph. The Commissioners, we be ieve, can demand the production of the title-deeds or not, according to their discretion; but the affair of yesterday was certainly not one that called for any leniency towards the accused, and it may be considered as a tolerably certain thing that the Ellengers will not be on hand when they are wanted.

WOMAN'S RIGHTS IN WYOMING. Woman's rights are triumphant in Wyoming Territory if nowhere else upon the surface of this mundane sphere. After all, practice is better than theory, and there is no more satisfactory way of testing the value of the principles preached so incessantly by the Susan B. Anthonys, Anna Dickinsons, Cady Stantons, and Olive Logans, who insist that the sphere of women is too contracted, that the men monopolize all the good things of the world, and that women are kept down to cooking dinners and nursing babies, for fear that they may interfere with some of the assumed masculine prerogatives if they are allowed a larger liberty, than to give the members of the sex feminine a fair, square, and impartial chance to show what they are good for in the way of doing the rough work of the world. We confess that we would not like to have the experiment tried upon too large a scale until there was a reasonable assurance that the principles of the women's rightists would hold good in practice, but it would be satisfactory if the oppressed ones could be afforded the opportunity they ask for to show us how much better the world would be under their management than it Is under the existing arrangement. We do do not know of a better place than Wyoming Territory for the advocates of women's rights to experiment to their heart's content, and it is therefore a matter for congratulation that the equality of the female sex with the masculine is an admitted thing in that section of the country. If Wyoming becomes the best governed, the most virtuous, and the most prosperous of all the States and Territories, under joint female and male management, the advocates for the emancipation of women will have achieved a substantial triumph, and encouragement will be given for those who have doubts about admitting all the claims advanced by such representatives of their sex as Miss Anthony, Miss Dickinson, and Miss Logan, to take a more decided stand than heretofore in favor of their side of the ques-

The first experience of the women of Wyoming Territory of the duties devolving upon them by their enfranchisement consisted in several of them being called upon to serve upon a jury in a murder case, which involved the uppleasant necessity of being locked up with a number of male creatures. The fema'e jurers, we are happy to say, performed their duty on this occasion without flinching: and having experienced some of the hardships incident to being allowed a voice and vote in the management of public affairs, the sex is now about to receive its reward in the probable election of some of its members to offices of trust, profit, and honor.

At the Republican convention held on Tuesday at Cheyenne for the nomination of county officers, Mrs. L. H. Pickett was nominated as the candidate for County Clerk; Mrs. M. H. Arnold for Superintendent of Public Schools; and Mrs. M. E. Post as a member of the Republican Committee. We sincerely hope that these ladies will be elected, and will distinguish themselves in their several offices, and we also hope that Messrs. Pickett, Arnold, and Post will not find the babies unduly difficult to manage while their wives are absent from home attending to their pubic duties.

WILL BIG JAKE COME IN?

THE news from the Cheyenne and Arrapahoe Agency indicates that the maintenance peace and order in an important portion of the plains hinges on the momentous question whether Big Jake will come in. Big Jake is "out" now, away from the agency, and disposed to come "in" provided no first-rate opportunity for attacking the settlements, camps, or trains of white men is offered. The great doubt which disturbs the breast of this romantic savage is whether it is nobler in the mind to suffer agents to half-cheat and halffeed his band of thieving warriors, or to march forth boldly on the highways and take, by force of arrows and the Spencer rifles kindly furnished to his amiable scalp-hunters, the lives and property of ignominious pale-faced sons of toil. There is a good deal of human nature in Big Jake after all. When the United States soldiers in his vicinity become numerous, and when they manifest a disposition to push things by following up the trails of marauders closely and by increasing the annual returns of dead Indians. Big Jake is always ready to come in. His bosom warms with love for his white brothers' and he is glad to stipulate that if his Great Father will only be good enough to keep his hunting grounds intact forever, and to give him an abundant supply of blankets, trinkets, war paint, arms. ammunition, horses and food, he will bury the hatchet. Butif, on the faith of a new treaty, the troops are withdrawn, Big Jake is equally ready to go out again as soon as a reasonable prospect is opened of the success of a murderons maranding expedition. Big Jake, and the class he represents, practise all the sins of savages, and they have few or none of either the savage or the Christian virtues. They are liars, thieves, and bloodthirsty villains of the deepest dye, and they come "in" or go "out" as they are controlled by

THE indefatigable and irrepressible Morrow B. Lowry, of Erie, is announced as an independent Republican candidate for the State Senate in the Erie and Crawford district, and the Democratic conference declined to nominate a candidate, because "in view of the very large Republican majority it is impolitic to make a nomination for Senator." This leaves an open field for Mr. Lowry against Mr. Delemeter, of Crawford, the regular Republican nominee. Mr. Lowry, in a letter to the Erie Dispatch, declares that Delameter is "in the interest of the Bergner and Mackey thieves," and that his nomination was procured by frauds so gigantic that they "will be remembered until the youngest voter in Crawford county shall have grown too old to attend an election." It will be seen that the old war-horse has on his fighting clothes, and he is for a war of extermination against the "ring thieves." What the result will be we cannot now safely conjecture, but Lowry will

THE SACRED BOOKS. THE great work of revising the English Bible has been naturally attracting a great deal of public attention to the subject, and as one of the results of the discussion it is proposed to prepare for the use of English readers a series of books that will present in convenient form the substance of the creeds of all other nations. These sacred books will embrace the Vedas, the Zendavesta, the Koran, the Edda, the Buddhistic or Pali Scriptures, the works of Confucius and Lao-tse, etc. It is of course not proposed to reproduce all these books in their original magnitude, but in such a condensed shape as will make them acceptable for popular use. None but the student would enter willingly into the difficult paths of that jungle of theological learningthe scriptures of the Asiatic nations. The general reader might well shrink back appalled from the one hundred and eight folio volumes that contain the canonical books of the devotees of Lama, or dread to enter upon themarvellous mazes of Hindoo psalmody, but the substance of these diffuse writings could be readily condensed into a portable, convenient, and attractive form.

OBITUARY.

The Right Hon. Sir Frederick Polleck, Bart. The death of this very eminent English lawver, formerly Chief Baron of the Exchequer, is reported. He was of Scotch descent, being a son of the late David Pollock, of London, but was born in that city in 1783. He was first a student at St. Paul's School, and went from there to Trinity College, Cambridge, where he became senior wrangler in 1806. He entered the bar at the Middle Temple in 1807, but did not become King's counsel until 1827, though he met with every success in his profession. For a long time he did a large business in Lordon and Westminster, being retained in nearly every case of importance. Mr. Pollock was returned as member for Huntingdon in 1831, and retained the office of representative until he was raised to the bench in 1844. In Sir Robert Peel's first administration in 1834, and also in his second in 1841, he was appointed Attorney-General. In April, 18:4, he succeeded Lord Abinger as Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer, and became a sworn member of her Majesty's Privy Conneil. The late Sir D. Pollock, Chief Justice of Bombay, was elder brother to the deceased. A younger brother was General Sir George Pollock. He retired from the bench in 1866, and the same year was created a baronet.

James B. Taylor. Mr. James B. Taylor, a well-known citizen and politician of New York city, died suddenly at his residence on Madison avenue in that city on Monday evening last.

This gentleman has been closely connected with political and public affairs in his own city for forty years or more, but has never held office. While the Whig party was alive he was one of its most active members, and was a strong personal friend of Governor Steward and others of the same class. Since the formation of the Republican party he has labored faithfully in behalf of that side. He was known as a great local speculator. At one time he was part proprietor of the West Washington market property, and also of Fort Gansevoort. Mr. Taylor had been absent from the city during the summer, and had just returned when the symptoms of the fatal disease showed themselves. He was confined to his room only during Monday, but was then perfectly aware of the serious nature of his malady. He suffered but little and died quietly. He was about sixty-four years of age.
